KIANDRA.
[FROM OUR SPECIAL COMMISSIONER.]
OCTOBER 12TH.—Since my last I have been over the greater part of these diggings, and I now propose forwarding you the result of my observations. It was generally supposed that at the present time Kiandra would boast of a large mining population, but the last few days seem rather to creased it; but for what reason I am at a loss to discover. For I unhesitatingly assert that, for the number of men engaged digging at the present time, there is not a field in the whole of the colonies that produces equal results. Where the amount of gold is obtained that is weekly sent from this place is working is 1200; in fact, my own observation leads me to believe that there is not even this number. This statement, I have no doubt, will surprise many, but not more than it does me, for I certainly expected to find a far greater working population. I will now endeavour to account for this state of things. The bulk of the men arriving here—and this applies to the Victorian miners in particular—are so disappointed at the appearance of the place, being so far from the

to any field in Victoria, that they are more disposed to take the accounts of the men knocking about the township and the various public-houses, than commence working. Within the last few days upwards of fifty men to my own knowledge have left, not one of whom has done a day's work. Many arrive here with the idea that this place is similar to the Victorian fields, that a large extent of alluvial ground on which "pick and shovel" men can drive the general encouraging had been much vice by way the colonial Wales, and soon to be a cost of steel nists had be present such is not the case, and this in a great measure determines many to return. Nearly all the ground that is payably worked is by means of sluicing, and to those who have not been so engaged, it presents obstacles and difficulties, and requires the outlay of a little money before men can expect to get gold. That the hill sinking here will be of considerable importance, I have little doubt; the holes bottomed on the New Chance Hill.

the gold is not confined to the creeks and rivers. Two of those already bottomed turning out very rich—as much as one ounce to the dish. My own opinion is that the gold found in the river will be traced into this hill. Should such prove the case, we may expect a continuation of this lead to a considerable extent.

twelve miles from here, on the Murrumbidgee, and report says they are generally doing well. I started for the purpose of visiting the place, and when within about three miles of it, was obliged to return, in consequence of the Tantangara Creek being bank and bank high. I hope next week to be enabled to send you particulars. On the Rocky Plains several men are at work in the river, but at present the bulk of them are only tracking along the banks.

Pollock's Gully.—On this place, so long deserted, a small population is now engaged paddocking the old ground—two small rushes have taken place on the camp side of it, a party of Victorian miners having obtained a very good prospect in a small gully that runs into it; they have commenced sluicing, and have informed me that they can make £1 per week.

NINE-MILE.—There is but a small population at this place, and those are mostly waiting the result of the tunnel that is being put in one of the hills, the storekeepers at this place having subscribed for the purpose—an example the people of Kiandra would do well to follow.

FOUR-MILE.—This place presents the nearest approach to the generality of the Victorian fields—the

the bulk of the miners only own a few claims, there have been several very rich claims. A great many are now engaged sluicing. Three puddling machines are now working, with very satisfactory results. Nothing here that goes less than from 3 to 5 dwts. to the load is considered payable; there is a great extent of ground that will be puddled and sluiced. To those puddlers who are engaged working around in the different parts of the colonies at from 10 to 12, to the load, this place deserves their attention. But, while stating these facts, I must caution them that their expenses will be greater—wages, stores, and horse feed being considerably higher; for, with all the talk about "tucker" claims, men are not to be got for less than £4 per week, many parties paying £5.

SURFACE HILL.—The men working on this hill are all satisfied. There are continual disputes about the

NEW CHUM HILL.—I have little to add with respect to this place, which is a small hill, but is very rich. There will not be a foot of ground on this hill, which is of considerable extent, but what will be worked.

The intelligence received here from Sydney of the report of the export duty on gold has given general satisfaction.

Government having promised £200 towards the erection of an hospital, a meeting of the committee was held on Tuesday, and it was arranged that a public meeting should be held on Monday next, for the purpose of placing the claims of the institution before the public.

The police are on the alert here—one or two of the most notorious vagabonds having been sent to Goulburn gaol to rusticate for six months, and several others have received warnings.

Gold, £3 11s. to £3 12s.

OCTOBER 13.—The escort to-day takes 1469 oz. 6 grs., and £1338. Considering the weather we had number of men working, it will, I think, bear out my previous statement, that no other field produces such satisfactory results.

Weather fine.

A land sale was held at New Providence, on Monday and Tuesday last, with the exception of those lots on which buildings are being put up, there was little or no bidding. I enclose particulars:—

Sir,—In Thursday's HERALD is a long letter signed "Ernest," written in a careful spirit, respecting the squabble about the Bishop of Sydney's Denary.

This writer has fallen into the same error as some of his predecessors. He says, "Bishops appoint archdeacons and rural deans and canons, and such inferior dignitaries, but

Now, in the first place, archdeacons are not dignitaries at all; and canons with prebendaries and deans are dignitaries. Next, the Bishops of St. Asaph, Llandaff, and Bangor, all have the dignities of the respective deaneries of those cathedrals in their patronage, and, therefore, in the Church of England the appointment of deans does not lie "beyond the scope of the episcopate."

"dignity" involved, were he pitchforked from the altars of decency down to an arid obscurity, is a question which may admit of little doubt. As soon might we expect her gracious Majesty, who is a "brobderly" of St. David's, to exchange her stall in that church for the decency of St. Andrew's.

I agree with "Ernest," in thinking it a great misapp that such a scumable should have arisen; and the sooner the dispute is settled the better for the peace and prosperity of the Church. But what has it really to do with

A list may be formed of the returns of some of the claims on this place; four men yesterday dividing £490 for a fortnight's work—£110 per man—not very bad.

DEAR SIR,

To the Editor of the Herald.

Sir,—In Thursday's HERALD is a long letter signed "Ernest," written in a careful script, repeating the equable assertion of the Bishop of Sydney's Denomin.

promoters. He says, "Bishops appoint archbishops and archbishops appoint bishops, and bishops appoint a bishop in England appoints the dean of his cathedral." Again, he says, "the appointments of cathedral deans lie beyond the jurisdiction of the bishops."

Now, is the first place, archbishops are not dignitaries at all; and caons with prebendaries and deans are not dignitaries. Next, the Bishops of St. Andrews, Glasgow and Bangor, all have the dignities of the respective deans of those cathedrals in their patronage, and, therefore, in the hands of the Church of Scotland, the deans do not reside "beyond the scope of the episcopate."

Whether the Rev. W. M. Cowper would consider his own dignity as a bishop, or the dignity of a bishop, as being less than that of an archbishop, is a question which may admit of little doubt. As soon might we expect our grievances here to be a "pious fraud," as we do in England, he said in that church for the deans of St. Andrews.

I agree, "Ernest," in thinking it a great misapprehension that such a squabble should have arisen; and the sooner the dispute is settled the better for the peace and prosperity of the Church. But what has it to do with the appointment of the Bishop of Sydney?

ENQUIRY.

MISS WOOD.—Our attention has been called to a full-length portrait manufactured for the Belgian Court in Ghent, by Messrs. Fawcett, Brothers, and Co. The handle, which is made of silver and encased in a beautiful black lacquer, is decorated, the principal of which are the Royal Arms of Belgium, and the lion rampant of the Netherlands. The portrait is decorated with the collar of the Royal Order, and surmounted by a crown.

UNION PRAYER MEETINGS—The usual weekly Union Prayer meeting was held at the Congregational Church, Pittsburg, yesterday evening. Owing to the unpropitious state of the weather the congregation was not as large as usual, except transient visitors. The service was conducted by the Rev. J. Trumbull, who, with the Rev. T. Smith, and Messrs. Stewart, Foxe, and others engaged in prayer. It was announced that the next meeting would be held in the Wesleyan Church, York-avenue, on Friday morning.

KIANDRA.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

OCTOBER 12th.—Since my last I have been over the greater part of these diggings, and I now propose forwarding you the result of my observations. It was generally supposed that at the present time Kiandra would boast of a large mining population, but last few days seem rather to have diminished that number; but for what reason I am at a loss to discover. For I understand that the present season there is not a field in the whole of the colonies that produces equal results. Where the amount of gold obtained that is weekly from this place is difficult to state, for the very highest estimate of the working is 1200; in fact, my own observation leads me to believe that there is not even this number. This statement, I think, will surprise many, and I am certain that I certainly shall not be able to find a far greater working population. I will endeavour to account for this state of things. The bulk of the men arriving here, and this applies to the Victorian miners in particular, are so disappointed in the appearance of the place, being so totally different to any field in Victoria, that they are more disposed to take the accounts of the men knocking about the township and the various public houses, than to commence working. Within the last few days upwards of fifty men on my own knowledge have left Kiandra, and I have no doubt that some day's work. Many arrive here with the idea of making a few days' work and going to be the Victorian farmers, that a large extent of the country, which "is a high level, and the water runs into water, sink holes and drains in the soil," is at present such is not the case, and this in a great measure determines many to return. Nearly all the ground is now payable for by means of drilling, and to those who have not been engaged in drilling presents obstacles and difficulties, and requires the aid of a skilled man before men can expect to get gold. The hill sinking here is not a new discovery, and of importance, I have little doubt; the holes bottom out in the New Chum Hill having established the fact that the gold runs down to the creeks and rivers. Two of these already bottomed out in the creeks and rivers. Two much as one ounce to the dish. My own opinion is that the gold found in the river will be traced into the hills, and should we prove the case, we may expect a continuation of this lead to a considerable extent.

To those miners who are acquainted with the Jim Crow Range, and the hills of Dayland, in Victoria, the high ranges running on to Spring Creek, that have been so profitably worked by means of tunnelling, many parts of this place present a very similar appearance, and the prospect of trying these hills are adopted, I have but little doubt most profitable results will follow. To those men engaged in the various districts of Victoria, and in this place has advantages in this respect to gold, and water not generally possessed there.

I started for the purpose of visiting the place, and when within about thirty miles of it, I was informed that a sequence of the Tantaranga Creek being below bank high. I hope next week to be enabled to sail you particulars. On the Rocky Plains several men are at the head of the river, but at present day there are only tucker claims—two only being of any account—and these yield from £10 to £12 per week per acre.

POLLOCK'S GULLY.—On this place, so long coveted, a small population is now engaged paddocking the old ground—two small rushes have taken place on the camp ground, and a party of prospectors have obtained a very good prospect for a small claim. It runs into it; they have commenced alluvial, and have informed me that they can make £1 per mas. a day.

NINE-MILE.—There is but a small population at this place, and those are mostly waiting the result of the tunnel that is being put in one of the hills, the storekeepers at this place are waiting for the same purpose—an example the people of Kiandra would be well to follow.

The yield is about 100 lbs. of gold less than from 3 to 5 dwts. to the load is considered payable; there is a great extent of ground covered by the sluices. To those who are engaged working ground, the different parts of the colonies at from 1 to 1 dwts. to the load, this place deserves their attention. But, while this is the case, the cost of their expenses will be greater—wages, stores, and horse feed being considerably higher; for, with all the talk about such claims, men are not to get paid less than 50 p. per week. A list may be formed of the returns of some of the claims on this place; four men yesterday dividing £490 for a fortnight's work—£110 per man—not very bad.

Sir,—In Thursday's HERALD is a long letter signed "Ernest," written in a careful script, repeating the equable about the Bishop of Sydney's Denomin.

Yours truly,
The

promoters. He says, "Bishops appoint archbishops and archbishops appoint bishops, and bishops appoint bishops; and so bishop in England appoints the dean of his cathedral." Again, he says, "the appointments of cathedral deans lie beyond the jurisdiction of the bishops."

Now, is the first place, archbishops are not dignitaries at all; and caons with prebendaries and deans are not dignitaries. Next, the Bishops of St. Andrews, Glasgow and Bangor, all have the dignities of the respective deans of those cathedrals in their patronage, and, therefore, in the eyes of the Church of England, the deans do not reside "beyond the scope of the episcopate."

Whether the Rev. W. M. Cowper would consider such a dignity as that of a dean, as being a "peerage," is a question of little consequence to an archbishop, is a question which may admit of little doubt. As soon might we expect our archbishops to be "peers," as we might expect our bishops to exchange their stalls in that church for the deans of St. Andrews.

I agree, "Ernest," in thinking it a great misapprehension that such a question should have arisen; and the sooner the dispute is settled the better for the peace and prosperity of the Church. But what has it really to do with the appointment of the Bishop of Sydney?

MISS WOOD.—Our attention has been called to a full-length portrait manufactured for the Belgian Court in Ghent, by Messrs. Fawcett, Brothers, and Co. men have the full value. But let this small measure that would give confidence to the creditor. Members on his side of the House, with want of liberality, and the charge was made by persons distinguished by education or talent. Before the House, as it at present stood, a man would find it more difficult to distribute land in order to encourage let them give it away; but if they were to make it as the property of the State, he would not agree to make such payments. The principle might be in private life, where the plan was made by the seller, in order to enrich the buyer. He repudiated this mode of dealing with the industrious man. A seller could never compete with other countries in the matter of all wages were reduced to the same level. Deferred payments to the seller would prove delusive—why not let him in the position of a tenant of the State? If the plan was to be carried out for carrying it out, which carried with it of compulsory improvement, which no man had a right to impose. He thought the State safely abolished the land taxes, and the value arrived at by appraisal. The operation of this bill would lead to the population and social retrogression. He would amend the bill in committee. He would vote for the necessity for reform on all sides. He approached the question from a personal interest in its settlement. He owned a quarter of a million of acres; and more interested in agriculture; and, more of these, he was interested in commerce. He was interested in the way the bill was settled, and this bill would do much towards that. He had always been in favour of payments, but not as embodied in the bill. He should be administered so as to encourage the agricultural settler occupy an acre of land, and when he had a part and fenced it and built a house, he should demand the fee simple. Every man for his land ought to do what he liked in populating the lands they would, by the consumption of durable commodities, and the State, and they might be without the means of doing it. The settlement of agriculturists in their vicinity. He trusted the Ministers in charge of the bill would be no compromise on its leading principles. Mr. LUGAN said that in the early times of the colony they owed everything to the small farm system. He desired hon. members to show an instance where the large grantee had cultivated his estate. He did not think this bill was a good bill as it stood, and if it were not amended in committee, he would be against the third reading. He strongly objected to the 21st clause which authorised the sale of land by auction at 5s. per acre. Who was to classify this land? Returns showed that the peasantry of France, where land was distributed among the people, were much better off than the peasantry of England. He approved of the principle of selection before survey, although he objected to much in the bill, he should vote for its second reading. Mr. HART considered that the question had been dealt with in a masterly manner, and that the provisions of the bill were exceedingly simple and laud. They

was in favour of small holdings as a principle. He did not think it would be right to set apart agricultural districts for the benefit of selection. In the Braidwood example, all the good land left in the hands of the tenant was in isolated patches, and the tenant would not be able to vote for the second reading of the bill. CAMPELL would vote for the bill. HENDER CAMPELL would vote for the bill, but not bind himself to any of its provisions. There were no party principles at stake, the question should be determined by mutual agreement. His objection to deferred payments, and to the conditions by which they were sought to be enforced, was a general one. Agriculture would pay in this colony; for the price of wheat never exceeded 5s., and the farmer lived; he was therefore in favour of immediate settlement. No country was better settled than New South Wales to supply itself with wheat. The farmers wished to quote the bill. Mr. Haines against deferred payments. The gentleman had lately visited America, and he was in Canada and the United States to see the effect of deferred payments had practically failed.

various classes placed in possession of the lands; he wished to see the question set at rest. Mr. MARTIN said there was much in the bill which he could cordially support, though he dissented from some of its principles. He thought all desired the bill passed, and he was prepared to vote for it in a candid spirit. He referred to the clauses that empowered the Government to reclaim water frontages. By the same clauses the Government were empowered to reclaim water frontages. By the same clauses the Government were just as much highways as the streets. If it were necessary to reclaim land of the Government he objected to doing it in the way proposed. In the free selection classes there was nothing to be admired; he was not strong enough with the framers of them. He did not see agriculture would pay in the circumstances; there was some land in the world not thirty miles from Sydney which would never pay for cultivation till the Government had a law. How could it pay for two hundred miles from Sydney? For he regarded the country for free selection but he was willing to give it a fair trial, and to selection before survey, and he was not disposed to the proposed limitation to the right of the land. He was prepared to extend the right of the land from the sea and from the river to the land. But if that unlimited right were granted, he would take up land on a head station, purposely to be bought off, and the traffic of the kind would spring up, and from pastoral industry last year, amounted to £100,000. The Government had been pursuing this pursuit that enabled the people and other large towns to live. It would be to injure wantonly this important interest, gold-mining interest in course of time, and that would remain if wisely dealt with. It was not a wholesome state of things to depend on one pursuit, and he was desirous to see the Government possess other branches of industry. He was already possessed, and they ought not to be. Mr. ARMOUR desired to reply to some of the arguments urged against the bill. He considered that pastoral lands should be persons engaged in agriculture should feel that they were identified with progress and welfare of the colony. At least one of the most valuable of the squattages held half a farthing an acre to the Crown. Mr. HARRIS had endeavoured to frame this bill fairly with all interests. As to agricultural improvements, he knew portions of land in the district eagerly sought at a rental of £2 or £8 an acre; none knew better than these small settlers how to pay. He would ask those who argued that the deferred payments would be repudiated if the squatters ever instructed their representatives to raise rent and assessment? Would the Government regard price as of no value compared with money value, but the twenty-five per cent. guarantee of good faith and intentions. A price of £1 were to be returned for lands purchased, it would be practically giving the security of tenure—for nobody would buy without some apparent agreement between themselves as to conflict in committee. He should support the bill, with the intention in committee of its principles, which he thought were free from all taint of embezzlement by a broker officer, both being engaged in a civil employment. He was tried for making this charge, as malicious, by a military tribunal composed in part of other civil officers, instead of which the case ought to have been sent to the Police Court. The investigation was unfairly conducted; the persons charged were not allowed to produce his witnesses, and inquiry by the House was highly desirable. After a somewhat lengthy debate, the motion was carried by 20 to 14.—Mr. HARRIS moved for a return of the applicants for letters of registration of inventions. He found that in reality there was no Patents Act here; no board to investigate claims; and that the system of imperfect letters of registration were much too high. In the United States patents could be obtained at very small cost. In 1868 no fewer than 3710 patents were granted in that country, not only in manufactures but in agriculture and every department of industry. Among other countries he found that France granted 5829, Great Britain 1869, and the colony of Victoria 53. Their object ought to be to encourage the inventive genius of man. He intended fore survey, and bona fide occupation by the. The bill was imperfect; he regretted the provision was made for the means of education, and the pioneers of settlement. The revenue ought to be set apart for the permanent improvement of the country. It cannot be applied to meeting our current wants. They should aim, in this bill, at the lands among the population, so as to be the most productive and conducive to the comfort and greatness of the country. The SPEAKER thought the framers of the bill had great consistency, and was entitled to all that he desired to see provision made for education, as had been suggested. Though he was in favor of free selection, he would not consent to a restriction of interest. He could not see any responsible in deferred payments: the reduction of purchase price at auction would be mischievous consequences. He believed all had one object in view, and withdrew that bill from party contention, and it is in the best manner in committee.

On Monday, 11th, the adjourned debate on the bill to introduce a bill to amend the law. The motion was subsequently passed without division, and the committee was appointed by ballot.—Mr. HART moved for leave to bring in a bill to amend the law relating to solicitors and attorneys. The proposition was perfect. His bill would admit clerks of five years' English attorneys, writers to the Signet, and colonial attorneys. It proposed an examination in classics for law students. It restricted the practice of attorneys to the districts where they resided, except when they appeared as advocates, and abolished the claim of certificated conveyancers. These were the principal provisions. Leave was granted.—On the motion of Dr. LANG, a committee was appointed to consider the Moreton Bay Immigration and Land Company's Act Amendment Bill.—On the motion of Mr. FARKES leave was granted to introduce a bill to abolish capital punishment.—On the motion of Dr. LANG, leave was granted to introduce a bill to abolish the law of primogeniture.

On Tuesday, 16th, in answer to Mr. HART, the COLONIAL TREASURER said the attention of the Government was some time back called to the cir-reading of the Land Bill was assumed that any party who denied that any party House, and could not see how it could be treated as a party measure. There were a large and important class of employers in the colony, and he was willing they should occupy the wild lands till they were needed for other purposes. The condition of the bill was objectionable, and without it would be virtual spoliation. At this debate commenced, he was in favour of the bill than at present, and free to confess there was much force in the arguments against it. Deferred payments and in principle. Still the bill was in his best produced, and he hoped the Ministers would amend the amendment offered with the view to make it a party measure. Mr. The Secretary for Works advocated the bill by the squatters of their leaseholds, but no such means of conversation was made. The only use of deferred payments was in the Crown lands, and yet one distant and distant.

thrown back to a depth of twelve feet from the knab, and in a greater degree to the extreme east of building. Prices have, however, for several months been made more reasonable, and have not yet risen, as it was expected they would, in consequence of the rush now taking place to the southern gold fields.

The ceremony of laying the foundation stone, so more properly speaking, the corner stone, of the new Bible Hall, at the junction of Spring and New First streets, and near the new Catholic church, was performed Denison a fortnight since. The ceremony is already up to the windows of the ground floor, and is a very central and conspicuous position, will be an ornament to that part of the city. The contractors are under engagement to complete the Hall in May next. The cost of the building will be $3400, in addition to $2000 given for the ground.

The Freemasons' Hall in Clarence-street is rapidly approaching completion; the roofing is now in progress. This is a very conspicuous object in the western part of the city, to which it will be a great improvement. The exterior is, as regards its architecture, elegant and imposing, and the interior will be a fine and commodious hall. The largest and most commodious public hall in Sydney, and the completion of the building will take place in February next.

Considerable progress has been made with the building belonging to the Turkish Bath Company, in Bathurst-street. The foundation is now laid, and is having massive Doric columns and a very striking one. The establishment will be fitted up with the requisite apparatus for administering Turkish baths, and also for carrying out hydropathic treatment generally. The walls are nearly up to the roof, and the building will be completed in February next.

The new telegraph station adjoining the Post Office in George-street is rapidly progressing. The stone from the quarry at the foot of the hill is being used only a width of twelve feet, its effect is lost through the projections on either side. The building will consist of two floors; the lower will contain a room for the telegraph office, and the upper offices; and the upper floor will be the operating room, and be thirty-four feet in depth. The station is to be completed in the course of next month, as the ap-
